

Watch Out for Those Pizza Rolls

Summary: A North Carolina couple used pizza rolls as the weapon of choice on each other.

Who knew pizza rolls could be used as a weapon? There is little doubt that when still frozen they could inflict some injury on another person or when hot could cause serious burns. A North Carolina couple has been charged after using the tasty treat to assault each other.

Brad Scott Beard, 24, and Samantha Brooke Canipe, 21, were charged on Monday with one count of misdemeanor simple assault each. The couple allegedly got into an altercation the night of the Fourth of July and resulted to using the nighttime snack against each other.

Read Fourth of July Fashion Ideas.

Police responded to the Gastonia apartment around 1 a.m. to find the young couple throwing the pizza rolls at each other. The motive for the encounter is uncertain. Maybe one of them wasn't sharing. It is also unclear if any injuries were sustained during the smack down.

See Domestic Dispute Between Man and Spider.

Beard is now facing 60 days in jail while Canipe only faced 30 days. They were released from jail the same night on $2500 unsecured bond.

Do you think the couple will be charged? Tell us your thoughts in the comments below.

To learn more about crazy pizza people, read Man Strips and Threatens to Shoot Up Domino's after Receiving Wrong Order.

Photo: myfox8.com